AMUSEMENTS.

MINS MARY ANDERSON AS JULIET.

Under circumstances not allogather favorable to no arduous an attempt Miss Mary Anderson made last night her second essay in New York, choosing for the must be set down as genuine and gratifying. The young lady's personal charms have been generally and sweetness, an intelligent comprehension of her lext and an undeniable capacity for depicting passionale emotion. Her action on the other hand is tometimes angular, her pronunciation at intervals there deficient in knowledge and finish. Her y-considering the enormous and varied strain vocal organs unavoidable in Juliet-surprisingly judicious and well sustained. Miss Anderson has talent, and a great deal of it. She is not yet a rest accress, out and grant to distant day. Higher praise it would be fair neither to the lady nor the public at this time to couler.

But even this, standing alone, and written of Miss Anderson's last night's performance is very high praise indeed. An ideal duliet is almost as impossible as an ideal Hamiet. To announce a fresh attempt on the character is commonly to heraid inlure. We go to ree it with interest, perhaps with hope, but come off for the most part, like Claudius, "as 'twere with a defeated joy," Shakespaare's enrices and lovellest creation is, in the stage sense, among his most difficult ones. It suggests mere than most others what Hazlitt speaks of as the difficulty of embodying a fancy or painting a simile. Exquisite reflectment, dainty yet soaring imagination, almost boundless passion, personal beauty, great physical force are among the qualifice that must be added to youth and culture to make an ideal Juliet. Without these she is unattaicable. Even with them the realization is often questioned and the completeness of the picture denied, and this was illustrated even by the generations that witnessed the triumplis of Miss O'Neill and Fanny Kemble. Remembering all this, and remembering Miss Anderson's as yet limited experience, her present effort and the effect produced on her public were of happy augury. Her early secure were fresh girlish and plausat, and in the great passage of the fourth act, where delict swallows the joilon, the actress displayed a power that was heartily and repeatedly applicated.

Mr. Plympton is a smooth and painstaking Romeo, and if not thus far quite equal to so executing a part, he is indensity and expert the surface and with the ballousy scene—gentlermance Miss Anderson, by the way, should ever thormance Miss Anderson, by the way, should not ever thormance Miss Anderson, and if not thus far quite equal to so executing a part as very meritorium and the part as very meritorium and the produce of the part as very meritorium and the part and the should be hardly possible history of her career. At Mmo. Janauschek's hands she received justice. By her she is shown to the world in all her strength and loveliness. This great and it could not have tallen on better shoulders. In ber acting we forgot everything but herself, all the scence with Mortimer, with Leicester and with Eliza scence with Mortimer, with Leicester and with Elizabeth she was at times sublime, and in the last act it was impossible to see her and not despise Elizabeth. One felt like rushing on the stage with a reprieve. The truth of the picture was terrible.

Miss Jeffreys-Lowis played Queen Elizabeth, and she was as much overweighted with the character as with the robes of the English Queen. It was a hard position for any actress to play this part against Mme, Janauschek's Mary, and that Miss Jeffreys-Lowis uid not invest it with any dignity or power is not to be wondered at. In the great scene in the castle yard between the two queens. Mme, Janauschek completely hid her rival from view. Miss Jeffreys-Lewis looked more like Lady Gay Spanker than Queen Elizabeth, and her scorn was simply petulancy. It is, however, due to this lady to say that she put good conscientious work into her impersonation, and that she did not do more with the part was because it was entirely out of her line. Mr. F. B. Warde played Sir Edward Mortimer with ardor, and gave satisfaction to his audiouse. Mr. Ringgoid made it aimost impossible for us to believe that the Earl of Locester could ever have been the idoi of two queens. The rest of the cast does not cell for special mention. The costumes were new and rich, and the play was well mounted. Mme, Janauschek was repeatedly called before the curvain, as was Miss Jeffreys-Lowis, Mr. Warde and Mr. Ringgoid.

THE GRAND OPERA HOUSE -ECSEDALE. The sensation of the west side last evening was the appearance at the Grand Opera House of Mr. Loster Wallack in his beautiful play "Rosedaie," and, if one may judge from the large and fashionable audience that assembled to greet the veteran actor and artist, Mesers. Poole & Donnelly, the proprietors, have no rea son to regret the enterprise that has appropriated one of the principal attractions of its Broadway neighbor. In a recent speech at Brooklyn, at the end of a play, Mr. Wallack ottered a truth which was demonstrated last night-to wit, that people will always crystallize eround a good performance and good actors. A more brilliant gathering has rarely been seen in a New York theatre, for it represented the family and club life, the wealth and beauty of the metropolia. In "Rosedale" Mr. Wallack as Elliot Gray is always the leador women, plays the part to perfection, and makes one wish his heroic portrayals would never end. While not unmindful of this fact Mr. Wallack, in order to lend greater effectiveness to his performance, not only transferred much of the scenery that his heretolore been employed in the presentation of the play at his own theatre, but also secured the services of some of the cast with which it has heretolore been produced with so much success. Among those who are descring of specific mention in connection with last night's performance may be mentioned the numes of Measrs. J. W. Shannon (Miles McKenna), B. F. Maginley (Bunberry Robb), Alexander Fitzgerald (Matthew Leigh), G. W. Browne (Farmer Greene, Alieses Lillie Ediridge, Kate Bartiett, Mrs. D. Vanderin, seiton, Weaver, Blaisdell and Mordaunt, Little Allie Dorrington, as Sir Arther May, also achieved a ripe share of the honors of the evening. The sets were very effective, although the waits between the acts prolonges the performance until after midnight, and the action was remarkably smooth for a first night. Mr. Wahack has reason to congratuate himself on the initiative success of his venture in occupying the boards of the Grand Opera House, and after his example others of ing figure who wins the admiration of men and the love our good actors will doubtless find in that locality, provided they present equally good plays, the same hearty support. "Rosedale" will probably be kept on the Boards of the Grand Opera House lor a couple of weeks, and its excellence, as represented by Mr. Lester Wallack, is likely to attract a full house of people nightly from all parts of the city.

TESTIMONIAL CONCERT. night by the public of Brooklyn, which was extraordi-nary in its completeness. The Academy of Music for many months has not been so crowded, and the ap-preciation shown of even the most inferior efforts of preciation shown of even the most inferior efforts of the singers was flattering. The sarenade by Fuebs by the "nonett of stringed instruments" was in parts exquisitely rendered. Miss Thursby sang the aris from Rigoletto, "Care Nome," in a manner so the as to evace prolonged applause, to which she responded with a simple, but besuttinal Scotch melody, displaying the fluest qualities of her voice. In the duett with Miss Drassit, "Dolce Comforto at Misero," its effect, in accord with a strong contralte, was to emphasize its delicacy of texture and its power of penetration. She sang later the luilaby "O Rush Thoo, My Baby," Almost every piece on the programme was encored, although it would be too much to say that such compliment was, in every instance, deserved by the artists.

Mr. D. H. Harkins played last night the role of Metamora or King Phillip in the well known tragedy of early American history. He was but leebly supported by the regular company of Wood's Theatre, but, nevertheless, succeeded in producing a favorable impression of his capacity as an actor on the large audience.

The stirring drama of backwoods life, "Si Slocum," was presented last evening at the Park Novelty Theatre, in Brooklyn. The Frayne Family exhibited very remarkable skill with the rifle, and the intelligent dog "Jack" created decided enthusiasm among the spectators.

What used to be statemed the more exacting and displied walks of the statement the more exacting and displied walks of the stage, whether because of the judic taste, these artists have either not entered upon or have abandoned. Miss Anderson is therefore to be judged by standards inapplicable to the beroines of French adaptations or plays of "contemporaneous human interest." She is not helped, as they generally are, by gorgeous modern totics, the splendar of scene setting and the numered food repetitions that beget considerance and enhats popular acceptance. She has to stand very much on her own merits, and this is a sound reason for seeking to do hour to those merits in the tellest measure that honesty will allow. We are glad to find the public of our mind in this regard, as is clearly shown by good houses and abundant applace. I should be a matter of national pride to sustain an American girl so richly girlied, and who, in so many respects, deserves cortini encouragement. 'Romeo and Juliet' will be repeated nightly until further notice.

BROADWAY THEATRE—"MARY STUART."

Last evening, at the broadway Theatre, Mme. Janauschek appeared for the first time in several years in this city in a translation of Schiller's famous historical play, "Mary Stuart." Mme. Japauschek has lost with more beauty; consequently she had temptatione that were unknown to the Queen of England. Say what we will for Elizabeth she was a heartiess woman. MANGEL'S WORST SELL

Augustus Mangel, a tall, hard-fisted German cabinetmaker, halling from New Jersey, was in deep grief yesterday while parrating a story of unrequited to Justice Duffy, at the Tombs Police Court. The recoffection of his woes was overpowering and he trequently stopped to wipe his eyes.

"She said she lofed me," he explained. "She got my money, twelf hoondred toliars, und she jiid me."

"Why did she jiit you?" asked the Court sympathizingly.

"She say she vas von beiress and she marry me. I gif her ail dot money she vant, but only to lend it—only to lend it," he repeated, anxious to impress that lact on the mind of the magistrate.

"It is no such thing Your Honor," said the defendant, a bright-eyed and handsome brunette, tasterally dressed in biack sits, sealskin sacque and a jannty hat. "My name is Pauline Bierman. This man was introduced to me four years ago. The lady who introduced him said that he was the biggest fool she ever saw, and I think that she told the".—

"Huan, Pauline!" interrupted the magistrate. "Go casy. How about the money?"

"Well, he paid me attentions, and during this time he made me various presents of money and valuables. After a while his company became distasted to mand I told him so."

"But dot twell hoondred tollars," urged Mr. Mangel, afraid that the principal point might be lost eight of.

"Yes, your $1,200. You said me in a civil court and you got no satisfaction. Then you had me arrested and brought before Judge Murray; now you bring me go the Tomba."

"Getting a little monotonous, eh?" suggested the Judge."

"Yes, it is so. I mean to pay him his money when I can," soid Pauline, smartly.

"I think it will sajourn the hearing until next Saturday," said the Justice. "That will do."

"But dot twell hoondred.—"

"Ar. Mangel's settence was broken short by the officer inviting him to step down.

MAJOR B. M. NEVERS.

He was first a captain and then mejor of the Seventh, and with that regiment be made the famous march to Washington at the beginbe made the famous march to Washington at the beginning of the war. Maior Nevers was a member of the Stock Exchange, and was president of the Open Board which was organized last year; but the nature of his business did not interfere with his intellectual pursuits. He was an adilgent reader, an earnest thinker and possessed fine powers as a conversationist. He was an accomplished Christian and gentleman and will be widely missed. Major Nevers was a member of Trinnty Church parish and attended the services la Trinnty chapel, where his funeral will be held the morning, at half-past nine o'clock. He was fity-five years of age.

UNITED STATES ARMY.

Licutenant Coionel Halsey, a prominent paymaster on the retired list of the army, died at his residence, No. 459 Willoughby avenue, Brooklyn, yesterday morning. The deceased was born in New Jersey and entered the service in June, 1861, as major and additional paymaster United States volunteers and served as such in the Army of the Potamac, in South Carolina, Western Virginia and in various departments of the South through the robeline. At the close of the war, in January, 1867, he was appointed from Vermont, in the regular army, as paymaster, with the rank of major, and subsequently prevetted licutessant colonel for faithful and ineritorious service. During the past few years Colonel Halsey had been on duty in this city, but his health failing, was, at his own request, placed upon the retired list in 1876. His funeral will be attended by a number of his old comrades and other officers of the army and by a delegation from the Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States, of which he was a member, at four o'clock this afternoon, at his late residence. Lieutenant Colonel Halsey, a prominent paymaster
